Vol. VIII, No. 69 | The County Seat Paper | NEVADA CITY, CALIFORNIA | The GOLD Center | Monday, July 9, 1934

State Must Find New Sources of Revenue

California State government is "broke," but not bankrupt!

Paradoxical though this may seem, at first glance, it is a fairly accurate description of the state's condition.

Hard-uressed for actual cash, with an imperative need of repairing its financial structure as soon as possible, California, nonetheless, has escaped the shutdown of its public school system, has averted a tax strike and has one of the healthiest credit ratings of any of the states in the Union.

And California municipal and district securities, for the most part, are in a preferred position in the world's money marts.

Such is the sunny side of California's financial dilemna. Comparatively (and most financial problems must be judged comparatively, during a period of depression), California is in unusually solvent condition, despite a $31,000,000 deficit and an excess of expenditures over income.

RELIEF TO REALTY OWNERS

The major factor contribufing to California's comparative soundness in tax and financial affairs has been the relief accorded to common property taxpayers this year under the Riley-Stewart tax relief plan, which relieved local taxpayers of some $80,000,000 in school costs. With all tax structures basically dependent on "ability of pay", it is probable that California would have witnessed serious tax strikes and "school holidays", if the over-burdened common property taxpayers had not been granted relief.

And property, today, even with the relief made possible under the Riley-Stewart plan, is still paying more than 60 per cent of the total cost of government-a factor which should be carefully weighed when new tax proposals are considered to balance the state budget.

NEW PROBLEM ARISES

Together with its advantages, however, the Riley-Stewart plan, when it becomes fully operative next year with the return of public utility property to local tax rolls will present new problems.

The state deficit, for example, will suddenly soar from $31,000,000 to approximately $96,000,000, when the state loses its regular $65,000,000 in gross receipts taxes from the utilities by yielding the utility properties to the county tax rolls. Local taxpayers, to be sure, will benefit by a second reduction in their tax bills, due to the broadening of the local tax base and the placing of utility property on a tax equality with general property.

But the state, having played the good Samaritan, and extended the helping hand to local government, must find new sources of revenue to offset the $65,000,000.

JOB MUST BE COMPLETED

The salutary phase of the whole situation is that California, unlike many other states, has at least taken the first step toward correcting tax inequalities and injustices which had penalized the common property owner and which threatened to destroy property values.

The problem now confronting the state is to complete the job of effecting a balance between income and outgo and placing state finance on a sound and equitable basis, the state will undoubtedly retain its enviable financial rating. But if it fails in finding the solution—permitting a continuance of the present disparity allowing the state deficit to increase actual bankruptcy of state government may very well ensue.

CHICO MINING EXCHANGE ASKS FOR MINING DEPT.

Led by their fiery leader, Capt. John D. Hubbard, the Chico Mining and Oil Exchange have put their cards on the table and make the following demand on the next Governor in the form of resolutions:

1. Requesting the governor-elect to establish a department of mines and mining for California under a capable director, taking this department out of the present department of natural resources, and bringing each department related to mining under its direction.

2. An entirely changed plan of compensation insurance, taking it out of political control entirely and under competition.

3. Firm and strict rules regarding safety in mines, and more power in enforcing them.

4. Favorable legislation for miners regarding water, timber and roads or trails.

5. Encouragement for outside capital to enter this state by offering a low compensation insurance rate.

6. A reasonable tax on gold bullion produced to apply only to the expense of the department of mines in California.

7. The ultimate restoration of gold mining to its former high place as a mojor industry in California.

8. Acquisition of all remaining railroads lands in California by the federal government and then throw same open to entry, thus creating a new field for prospecting and development.

9. More favorable encourangement for hydraulic mining from the federal government.

Editor's Notes—No. 1 will not be necessary when the Division of Mines is granted a sufficient appropriation to do more than just keep up its overhead. At this time the Division gets but $75 per month for traveling expenses, the result being that the engineers sit in their offices and draw their salaries, unless some public spirited mining man comes along and takes them for a ride. There might be some call for a seperate Mining department, headed by a business man. A purely technical staff and division head are too conservative for the rapid develoment of the state's great mining area.

5. Could be eliminated as it would result if No. 2 were adopted.

Ditto for No. 7 as it would be attained thru the adoption of the remainder.

No. 9 is already attained according to late news from Washington.

The Stain

A child's cry in the darkness curses deeper
Than a man in his wrath.
E. B. Browning.

Where a silvery stream is flowing
Through a green and sun-flecked glade,
Little children are playing,
Care free and unafraid;
I hear their ringing laughter,
Their lithesome forms I see,
And borne on the summer breezes
Gay songs float up to me.

But I'm thinking of other children,
The sorrowing ones of earth,
Robbed of the rights of children,
Its innocent playtime mirth;
I hear their sobs in the darkness,
Their cries of pain and fear,
And see in their faces the longing
For all that a child holds dear.

Frail are these tender blossoms
That fall in the spoiler's path,
Where greed and the lust for power
Trample them down in wrath;
Helpless they cower and tremble,
Weary are they and sad,
Whose voices should thrill with laughter,
Whose faces be bright and glad.

Oh! sons of a mighty nation,
Hosts of far-flung land,
Do we need the wealth we garner
From a baby's toil worn hand?
If we smile when young hearts are breaking,
And listlessly turn away,
Unheeding the woes of children
Too weary to romp and play,—

Some day at the bar of justice
We shall stand with this stain defiled,
And read our condemnation
In the face of a little child.

RODDA REPLIES TO COMPLAINT OF JUDGE CLEVELAND

Regarding the letter by Acton M. Cleveland and addressed to the Nevada County Supervisors, published in the Nevada City Nugget last week, in which the charge was made that an Oakland man, injured near Camptonville in a road accident, had been refused admission or first aid treatment at the Nevada County Hospital.

R. W. Rodda, superintendent of the hospital, in an interview given to a Grass Valley newspaper Friday, puts a somewhat different aspect on the case, since he stated that the injured man was turned away because he was a pay patient and from another county, and according to the rules of the hospital, such patients may not be accepted.

The report of Mr. Rodda's statement follows.:

The man was brought to the hospital by an ambulance just after an emergency case of a man with a broken leg was being handled in the hospital X-ray room. The man was in such condition that he was not even removed from the stretcher, but was taken in to have the x-ray taken immediately.

While this patient was being taken into the x-ray room the case from Camptonville was reported to the superintendent and he went to the ambulance and examined the man who was sitting up in the ambulance and did seem to be in a serious condition. Rodda states he told the orderly to prepare a room for him and he would attend to him as soon as possible.

In the meantime the driver of the ambulance reported that the man was a "pay patient," had money to pay for services rendered to him, and it was then that the ambulance driver was told to take the man to either the Nevada City Sanitarium or the Jones Memorial Hospital in Grass Valley, as the Nevada County hospital was not authorized to accept pay patients from other counties.

NEW RELAY OF GIRL RESERVES AT GOLD HOLLOW

BY CAMP CORRESPONDENT

On Monday, July 2nd, thirty-five old campers left and the same number of new ones arrived to take possession of the beds in the apple orchard and to join in the happy experience of camping at Gold Hollow. The Fourth of July was also election day and the returns were announced at an international luncheon held in the Lodge. Jerry Wharff of San Francisco is our new major or alcade as he was called in the beginnings these parts. Beverly Starr of Berkeley is the sheriff and her two deputies are also from Berkeley, Sylvia Scott and Sally Shaw. The master of cermonies is Thelma Gartside from San Francisco; the postmistress Barbara Greathead of Vallejo and Val Rasmussen is librarian. The camp song leader is Zelma Romaine of San Francisco.

At the luncheon on the Fourth the decorations were International flags and the girls came in costumes of the nations-improvised on short notice but very colorful. Appropriate songs were sung from the different countries represented. A buffet supper, boating in lantern-bedecked boats, sparkle on the dock and a camp-fire and marsh-mallows completed the celebrtions.

On Thursday morning an S. O. S. came from Camp Austa and 20 Girl Reserves armed with buckets rushed over and helped fight a fire.

Friday night the whole camp was entertained at a program round the camp fire in our Primitive Camp. It was Animal Night and each person wore one thing to indicate the sort of animal she represented. Dramatics, stories, songs, games and animal crackers carried out the idea.

On Saturday the Dancing Interest Group give a dance program in the lodge living room under the direction of the dancing counselor, Miss Nairn Abbott who is a student of Adolph Blohm in San Francisco.

An exhibit was held last Sunday of the work done in the craft group and consisted of tea tiles-pine-needle and raffia mats-block prints-decorated buttons, tin animals, candle scones and other things which the girls have made using the natural materials about them as much as possible.

The Sunday vespers were held in our hill-side chapel over looking Lake Vera the girls furnishing the music and litany and Miss Mildred Knapp of Oakland giving the chapel talk.

Hiking, horse-back riding, primitive camping, conoeing, swimming and dramatics are other activities that have added to the fun of the psast week.

MAGUIRE NAMED TO MAP GRAVEL ON WATERSHEDS

William Maguire, Jr., a well known mining engineer, has returned to Nevada City under appointment by the California Debris Commission to make an examination and report on the gravel and hydraulic mining property in the watersheds of the South Yuba, Bear, and American river watersheds and that portion of the Middle Yuba watershed that does not drain into the Bullard's Bar dam.

The work is being done under the appropriation of $90,000 secured by Congressman Harry L. Englebright from the Public Works Administration for preliminary work prior to the actual construction of dams on these rivers to impound hydraulic tailings.

The cost of the construction of the dams is to be returned to the govenent through the payment by mining companies operating above the dams according to the amount of tailings impounded by them.

At a Nevada County Farm Bureau meetisg last Saturday the members discussed a proposal in regard to fees being paid by members towards hiring a dortor by the year, the members to receive full care in time of illness without additional cost. Carl Tobiassen of Nevada City, Walter Parsons and John Beiber were appointed as a committee to interview doctors and hospital staffs in Nevada county.

DEMURRER IN DAMAGE SUIT IS OVERRULED

Judge Raglan Tuttle today overruled a demurrer filed in the case of Lois V. People vs. Carl P. Jones.

Lois V. Peoples, a girl 19 years of age, is suing Dr. Jones through her guardian ad litem, her father, for $60,000, alleging that the defendant unlawfully and without the consent of her parents, performed an operation upon her which rendered her sterile.

Judge Tuttle in overruling the demurrer submitted to the complaint, held that: "The general rule appears to be that, where a patient is in possession of his faculties and in such physical health as to be able to consult about his condition with him, his consent is a prerequisite to a surgical operation by his physician In such circumstances a surgeon has no legal right to operate upon a child or a minor without the consent of the parent or guardian.

"Admitting the rule to be as stated, defendant contends that a istinction should be made in cases such as this, where the minor was some 19 years of age. He has cited no cases which uphold his contention, nor has the court been able to find any authority supporting this rule.

"The objections to the complaint are without merit and accordingly it is ordered that the demurrer be overruled. with ten days to answer."

BURGLARS ROB CARTASCELLIS

Burglars early Saturday morning entered the liquor store of Cartascelli Bros. on lower Sacramento street and made off with most of the stocks of whiskey and liquors valued at $200. Mr. Cartascelli reported the burglary to the sheriff's office and Sheriff Carter is now working on the case. It is believed to be the same burglar or burglars who entered and robbed the Standard Oil station in Gsass Valley a few days ago. In both instances entrance was affected by cutting out the lock with huge shears such as plumbers use.

Impressions of finger prints were taken and also foot prints. An automobile or truck was used to remove the plunder.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR H. J. WRIGHT

Funeral services were held this morning for the late H. J. Wright, former county treasurer. The services were in charge of the Holmes Funeral Home.

Mr. Wright passed away in his home on East Broadway Saturday, after an illness of several years. He was born in Minnesota and had been a resident of this city for more than 40 years. Many friends mourn his passing and a profusion of flowers at the services this morning bore testimony to the high esteem in which he was held in this community.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Nellie Wright, and five sons; Dr. H. J. Wright of Healdsburg, H. G. Wright of Haywards, Roland, Courtland and B. F. Wright of this city, and a sister Mrs. C. M. Harlan of Bloomington, Ill.

Following the services the remains were conveyed to East Lawn cemetery for cremation.

Miss Elma Hecker, deputy county treasurer, visited Washington, Spanish Mine and Poorman's Creek on Sunday. Miss Hecker is interested in distributing campaign cards for Treasurer Frank Steel.

AIRPORT FUND ASSURED IF CITY WILL ASSIST

The SERA will provide $5100 more for completing the Nevada City airport, if Nevada City will add $1,600 to that sum.

This was the conclusion reached Friday afternoon following the visit to this city of Capt. Robert L. Campbell, assistant to Capt. Doolin, Federal airport supervisor for California, and Gene Kenyon, deputy director of SERA.

Accompained by former Mayor R. J. Bennetts, Mayor Al Seaman, and Councilmen Hall, Penrose and Kopp, City Engineer Edw. Uren, and City Clerk George Calanan, the two officials visited the airport, studied the engineering data compiled by Mr. Uren and came to the above conclusion.

Clearing off the few trees that still remain, grubbing out roots, scarifying and oiling with asphaltum residue, are the chief features of the work still needing to be done to make the field acceptable to the Federal government as an airport.

With this work accomplished both Campbell and Kenyon agreed that the airport would be of sufficient size and facilities to accomodate the largest commercial planes.

The city council will meet tomorrow evening to discuss this matter.

Steady Filtration of Japanese Into Brazil

Japanese colonists in Brazil now number about 140,000, according to an investigation made recently with the assistance of the bureau of international research of Harvard university and Radcliffe college. They are there as the result of a varying stream of emigration which began about 1907.

These colonists own about 1,225,000 acres, and the greater part of them are settled in the state of Sao Paulo—where they number 125,000—and the adjoining state of Minas Geraes. A few thousand live in the northern part of the country.

The first Japanese colony was established in 1912, in Iguape, Sao Paulo, where the Overseas Enterprise Joint Stock company of Japan owns at present a plantation of more than 154,000 acres. The immigration began with contract laborers, needed because the coffee industry was suffering from a shortage of labor. Practically all the Japanese in this region are engaged in agriculture.

The government-subsidized Yokohama-Buenos Aires line of the Osaka Shosen Kaisha brings the emigrant to his new home and the supervision of the Overseas company continues in Brazil.

Year of Dryness

Perhaps 1934 will be known in history as the year of the drought. Abnormally dry weather prevailed over Central Europe and in early June it damaged German crops to a minimum of 25 per cent. In England more than 160 rural areas were short of water and the rainfall for the year ending May 31 was the lowest ever recorded. The level of the Thames fell so much that fish were landlocked in many backwaters.—Literary Digest.

Little Girl's Face Inflamed by Psoriasis

Healed by Cuticura

"My little girl's face was so inflamed that her eyes were swollen almost shut. The trouble was diagnosed as psoriasis. She scratched night and day and was not able to obtain rest. The scratching aggravated the trouble and each finger tip was red and swollen with infection. She became so emaciated that she was very pathetic looking.

"After three months' suffering I recalled the Cuticura treatment used by my mother. I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and used them according to directions. The first treatment brought relief and she is now healed." (Signed) Mrs. Marie I. Johnson, 4720 Ames Ave., Omaha, Neb., March 14, 1934.

President Cleans Desk for Hawaii Cruise—Drouth Relief Funds Allocated for Middle West—Federal Reward for Dillinger's Arrest.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, back from his brief trip to New Haven, New London and his home in Hyde Park, put in a busy week clearing up his desk for his departure on the long planned cruise through the Panama canal to the West coast and Hawaii. All those who have had occasion during the last generation to call at the White House are glad to learn that Rudolph Forster was selected by the President to make the voyage with him. Since the days of McKinley this able and courteous gentleman, now executive clerk in charge of the White House executive offices, has been on duty and never before has he accompanied any President on a trip. Now Mr. Forster is going to have a real vacation, and Secretaries Howe, McIntyre and Earle will remain behind to take care of the White House. There will be no other civil officials aboard the cruiser Houston.

Rudolph Forster

On the way down to the canal Mr. Roosevelt will visit Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. From Panama City he will go to the Hawaiian Islands, first making a brief stop in Colombia. Returning to the Pacific coast early in August Mr. Roosevelt will travel overland by rail, and there is a possibility he will make some speeches, probably in Minneapolis and Green Bay, Wis., where the tercentenary of the Badger state will be celebrated.

IMMEDIATE relief for the drouth stricken areas in the Middle West was decreed by the President in an executive order which allocated $56,250,000 for direct aid. The remainder of the first distribution of federal relief for the drouth area included $43,750,000 for purchase of seed, food and live stock; $25,000,000 for seed and feed loans, $12,500,000 for purchase of lands in the drouth regions, and $12,500,000 for establishment of civilian conservation camps in the stricken region.

FINAL settlement of the questions in dispute between the steel masters and their workers is expected and the threatened strike probably will be averted. The President, invoking his new emergency powers, named a three-man board to arbitrate the industry's troubles, and both sides indicated they would accept its decisions. The members of the board are Admiral Henry A. Wiley, James Mullenbach of Chicago and Judge Walter Stacy of the North Carolina Supreme court. The two latter have had long experience as labor mediators. Under the emergency law this group can order and police elections in all steel plants to determine which union shall represent the men in collective bargaining. The board can also hand down decisions on all complaints brought by either workers or employers.

President Roosevelt ordered the board to report to him from time to time through Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

IT MAY be necessary to resort to the emergency labor legislation to put an end to the street car strike in Milwaukee. A minority of the company's employees went out and by violence forced the suspension of service. The mobs fought the police and attacked the company's electric plant and its cars.

The American Federation of Labor unions are trying to compel the company to recognize their representatives in dealing with employees instead of the company union with which it has had a labor contract for 16 years.

Rev. Francis J. Haas, formerly of Milwaukee and now chief conciliator for the national labor board, was sent to the Wisconsin city with full authority to act. Mayor Hoan, a Socialist, held the company responsible for the strike and ensuing riots.

FEDERAL JUDGE J. P. BARNES of Chicago gave one phase of the New Deal a rap by granting an injunction restraining the government from enforcing the provisions of the AAA milk licensing agreement against the independent milk dealers in the Chicago area. In effect, the judge ruled that the government, through the AAA, has usurped powers which under the Constitution it had no authority to assume.

The AAA officials in Washington declared they would seek to have Judge Barnes' ruling set aside. Jerome Frank, general counsel for the AAA, admitted that if the decision were upheld by higher courts, the fifty marketing agreements now in force under the farm act and hundreds of the codes under the NRA would be without constitutional sanction.

HARRIMAN hosiery mills, the concern that was deprived of its Blue Eagle last April, has been forced to close down, and its 653 workers are out of jobs. The little city of Harriman, in Tennessee, depended largely on the mills and the company had the support of practically all the people there in its dispute with the NRA. The officials of the company sent to Administrator Johnson—and to President Roosevelt—a vigorous protest, asserting the concern had been unjustly and unfairly deprived of its property rights in the Blue Eagle.

"We would like to know," said the letter, "if the Blue Eagle is the property of the law-abiding citizens of the United States or if it is a plaything to be held over the heads of honorable and decent employers as a cudgel to browbeat and bulldoze them into surrendering their constitutional rights for the benefit of outside agitators whose only purpose is to exploit labor for their own personal gain."

General Johnson's reply was in effect that the company could stay closed forever if it wished to, but it must comply with the NRA regulations to get back its Blue Eagle.

The dispute started last October, when about 300 employees went on strike with the claim that the company would not reinstate twenty-three workers who had joined the United Workers' Textile union.

Fred Held, vice president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, went to Harriman after the mills closed, but was taken from the train by a band of armed men, taken some distance in an automobile and released on promise not to return.

POSTMASTER GENERAL FARLEY and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau came forward with an announcement of their plans for the spending of $110,000,000 in the construction of new post offices and federal buildings.

In all, 626 communities in every state and four territories have been selected for new federal buildings, according to the announcement. Half of the program—302 buildings—will be undertaken with $65,000,000 authorized for that purpose in the recently enacted deficiency-emergency appropriation bill. It was explained that 324 buildings will be constructed with "funds already available from other sources."

UNCLE SAM is determined to get John Dillinger, the country's most notorious desperado. A few days ago Attorney General Cummings offered a reward of $10,000 for the capture of the murderer and bank robber, and half as much for information leading to his arrest. At the same time the attorney general offered $5,000 for the capture of Lester M. Gillis, alias "Baby Face" Nelson, Dillinger's right-hand man. Information leading to Gillis' capture will be rewarded with $2,500.

John Dillinger

This action was followed up by consideration of plans for co-ordinating federal, state, and local efforts to catch Dillinger. It was understood that plans using the army and National Guard in the offensive were under discussion.

The federal charge against Dillinger is transporting a stolen automobile across the state line. Nelson is wanted in connection with the murder of W. Carter Baum, Department of Justice agent, near Rhinelander, Wis., April 23.

In addition to the federal prize, the person who can catch Dillinger will receive $1,000 reward from each of five states—Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and Minnesota.

SITTING in his White House study, President Roosevelt talked over the radio directly to millions of his fellow countrymen, seeking to reassure those who have been alarmed by the frequent allegations that the New Deal is becoming radical. He rebuked his critics as "doubting Thomases," "prophets of calamity" and "theoretical diehards," and by implication defended the brain trust. He highly praised the departing congress for its work in the lines of relief for the distressed, recovery and "reform and reconstruction."

Mr. Roosevelt told his listeners the simplest way they could judge recovery was to consider their own situations.

"Are you better off than you were last year?" he asked. "Are your debts less burdensome? Is your bank account more secure? Are your working conditions better? Is your faith in your own individual future more firmly grounded?"

SOMETHING like a hundred thousand Americans and Canadians gathered in Detroit for the good will celebration which was held on the Ambassador bridge under the auspices of the American Legion and the Canadian Legion. The bridge, which links Canada and the United States across the Detroit river, was turned into a huge playground and customs and immigration barriers were lifted for the day.

GIVING up hope for a disarmament pact at Geneva, the British government has under way extensive plans for strengthening its air force for defense of the country. This was announced to parliament by Lord Londonderry, secretary for air. He turned down a suggestion for an imperial air force for the defense of the empire, but said there would be close co-operation with the air forces of the dominions.

IN A note to Secretary of State Hull, the British government rejects his suggestion that the war debt might be paid in kind, holding that such a procedure would be impractical and dangerous to Anglo-American trade. The British expressed a wish for settlement of the debts problem "whenever it may appear that the present abnormal conditions have so far passed as to offer favorable prospects for a settlement."

NAZI storm troops in Germany have demanded that the Stahlhelm, or Steel Helmets, composed of war veterans, be banned by the Hitler government. But the leaders of the organization reply that it shall not be suppressed or absorbed in the storm troops. The existence of the Stahlhelm, they assert, is guaranteed by President Von Hindenburg, Chancellor Hitler, and other Nazi chiefs.

ON THE twentieth anniversary of the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand at Sarajevo, the event that precipitated the World war, there were bombing outrages throughout Austria directed against the Dollfuss government and possibly instigated by the Nazis. Certainly the disorders were political in nature. Power plants, railway lines, and one newspaper office were blown up.

WITH congress adjourned and the President preparing for his Hawaii cruise, Miss Margaret Le Hand, confidential secretary to Mr. Roosevelt, decided to take a vacation, so she sailed for Europe. Now comes from Paris the positive statement that Miss Le Hand is to be married to William C. Bullitt, American ambassador to Russia, and that she was making the final arrangements in the French capital. The young lady would say nothing in confirmation or denial except to declare that she was not going to Russia, but the correspondents were sure the plans were well advanced for what it had been hoped would be a secret wedding. It was understood that Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., a close friend of the President, would act as best man for Mr. Bullitt. Mr. Vanderbilt is in the Riviera, and Miss Le Hand also was booked to go there before returning to America late in July.

Margaret Le Hand

Ambassador Bullitt is a widower and has a young daughter who is now with him in Moscow.

INFORMATION was given the house committee investigating War department expenditures that prices quoted the government on automobiles have jumped since the issuance of the executive order excluding Henry Ford from bidding until he certifies compliance with the NRA. Representative Kvale of Minnesota said he had evidence to back up this charge, and that the situation has cost the government thousands of dollars already.

"For Henry Ford to submit a certificate of compliance," Mr. Kvale said, "would mean he would have to secure 5,000 certificates of compliance from those who furnish parts and products for his cars. That is obviously impossible."

The committee called on War department officials to reply to this accusation.

HERE is more woe for President Mendieta of Cuba. The A. B. C. society, strongest of the secret political associations in the island, has announced that it would no longer support the Mendieta government. The reason given was "the lack of firmness displayed by the government in dealing with terrorists, especially with men responsible for the assault on the A. B. C. parade June 17."

The A. B. C. manifesto said the society would continue to work for the good of Cuba against terrorism and other forms of "gangsterism" which "are directly traceable to the influence of Moscow gold."

A crisis in the cabinet resulted and several members, who belong to the A. B. C., offered their resignations, as did 600 employees of the treasury department.

A committee of conciliation was at work on the government's troubles and it was reported that it might suggest a parliamentary form of government headed by a prime minister. The A. B. C. leaders would agree to this if the premier were chosen from their ranks.

BILATERAL conversations on naval strength, being conducted in London by the United States, Great Britain and Japan preparatory to the coming conference, did not appear to be getting anywhere. The British submitted a plan whereby the United States should sink its battleship fleet and Britain should be permitted to build a large number of small cruisers, airplane carriers and airplanes, and they, the proposers, were frightened by their own temerity. Meanwhile the Japanese delegate told the American representative that his government was increasingly suspicious of an understanding between Britain and America that would work to the detriment of Japan.

Babson got out his life insurance policies and read their provisions carefully. He knew there was a clause in them which nullified them if the insured committed suicide, while sane or insane, within a certain period following the issuance of the policy. Yes, that period had now passed. He had two hundred thousand dollars' worth of life insurance in force and his wife was the beneficiary. His creditors could not levy on that. So he wrote his wife a letter, instructing her how to invest the insurance money safely to yield six per cent, enclosed this note in an envelope and returned it to the tin box marked "S. B.—Personal." This box he placed in the bank vault where it would be found readily; then he left a note for Mr. Rookby, got in his car and drove away up country . . .

Two weeks later Rube Tenney found his body floating beside the headgate at Lake Babson. A gentle wind was blowing across the lake and Mr. Babson's body was bumping the headgate gently and persistently, as if he still insisted it be opened.

CHAPTER XIV

When Silas Babson failed to come home for dinner the night the Bank of Valley Center closed forever, his wife waited until eight o'clock and then telephoned Henry Rookby. Upon Mr. Rookby immediately fell a suspicion that something tragic impended. He found Babson's tin box unlocked, so he opened it and found Babson's letter to his wife in the envelope with the life insurance policies.

Shaking slightly, with apprehension, Mr. Rookby went into his cage and found there an envelope addressed to to him. It was from Babson and read:

"Dear Henry: I can't stand it. If I live my wife and children will be paupers and I'll be the most hated man in this county. I could never beat back—and I'm too old to try. And I'm too tired. Look for me in Lake Babson. Good-by and good luck. S. B."

So Mr. Rookby telephoned the superintendent of state banks at the capitol to send somebody up to take charge of the Bank of Valley Center. Then he pasted a notice on the window, announcing the closing of the bank.

The payment of the semi-annual interest had been due on July 1. Alas! The funds of the district had been deposited in the Bank of Valley Center, and all but 30 per cent of them had been lost in the collapse of the bank; so the district, not knowing what the holders of its bonds purposed doing, defaulted on the interest payment.

On July 2 the trustee for the bondholders notified the district that unless payment of the defaulted interest was made by August 1 legal action would be taken to foreclose the deed of trust given to secure the bonds.

The directors of the district held a meeting. They recalled Nate Tichenor's threat to buy the bonds from the original purchasers. Was he scheming to delude the farmers of Forlorn Valley into growing more and more alfalfa and planting trees, thus enriching his land to a point where his threatened foreclosure would make the disaster all the greater?

The secretary was instructed to write to Tichenor's attorney and ask him for a frank exposition of Nate Tichenor's intentions. Back came a prompt reply to the effect that Tichenor's intentions were unknown to his attorney; that Tichenor was in Europe.

A mass meeting was held, but while there was much talk there was no concerted action; since nobody knew what to do, nothing was done, and on the first day of August the interest payment was still in default. On the second day of August suit was filed by the trustee to foreclose the deed of trust, and Forlorn Valley, realizing that all was over, sat dumbly and patiently awaiting the end.

The farmers could do nothing else. They had no place to go, so they waited to be dispossessed formally by the sheriff.

On December 30 Nate Tichenor and his wife came home. Darby met them with the limousine when they got off the train at Gold Run and noticed that they were accompanied by a nurse who held a two-months'-old baby in her arms.

"Hello," said Darby, "I see I got another boss."

"A boy, Darby. We had to have an heir to Eden Valley, you know."

"I suppose you've heard the news about Forlorn Valley."

"Yes, sir. Seems pretty bitter medicine, but they asked for it, as Rube says, and they got it."

"You bet they got it. Have any of the farmers in the district moved out?"

"No, I don't think so. Joe Brainerd says they haven't any place to go, so they're hanging on, hoping the new owners will lease the farms back to them, sir."

"Well, that might be possible. Stow the bags, Darby, and let's go. We must be out in Eden Valley for luncheon."

Halfway through Forlorn Valley they met one farmer who had decided not to wait to be evicted. He was driving a four-horse team attached to a farm wagon upon which were piled his household goods, and on an old mattress atop the load four children sat. His wife was on the front seat with him and following up the wagon came a fourteen-year-old boy on horseback, herding before him some loose work horses, two milch cows and their calves. There was about the sorry cavalcade an atmosphere incredibly forlorn . . . the woman was weeping; as the Tichenor car slid by, the farmer gazed at its occupants apathetically and raised his hand in a gesture that was half a greeting, half a farewell.

"There's one of them moving out, sir," Darby said over his shoulder.

"It's terrible of the bondholders to dispossess them in the middle of winter," Lorry declared.

"That's the man that kicked my ribs loose from my spine," her husband reminded her. "Still, now that his kicks are only a memory, I can't say I'm enjoying his pitiable condition as much as I thought I was going to."

"He waved to you, Nate. He didn't appear to be hostile."

"Oh, he knows me pretty well. I went to school with him. An ignorant chap but not a bad fellow. I wish him luck."

Her hand stole across and over his. "I always knew you couldn't hold a grudge, darling."

"I'm afraid it has to be fed regularly in order to thrive, Lorry, and my grudge against the people of Forlorn Valley has been starved for nearly a year. . . . Well, I went through with it, just as I promised them I would—just as I promised you I would. I can forgive my own enemies, I think, but forgiving yours is quite a different matter."

"I've felt the same about you and your persecutors, Nate. Still, I wish we hadn't met that man and his little family."

He stared stolidly ahead. "Would there be any sense in paying our debt of hate if we couldn't see our enemies suffer?" he demanded.

"Oh, Nate!" He looked at her and saw her eyes were moist with emotion. "We're still hillbillies, dear. We should have stayed outside several years more. We're not quite civilized yet."

"Are you chiding me, Lorry? I can't recall having heard you put in a kind word for these people heretofore."

"I know it, Nate. I had my share of conceit, too." The words came tremblingly. "I thought I could hold a grudge better than you could and I told myself I had to be strong—for your sake. I was afraid you'd weaken—and I wanted you to triumph in a big way."

"Well, I had figured on a very different sort of triumph, sweetheart. I wanted to let the people know that something fine could come out of Eden Valley. But my back is still a little weak; sometimes it hurts—just enough to keep my hate alive—just enough to make me think that mercy would be weakness—"

"Poor dear! So you've been having a rough time, also? I'm glad. I think we ought to fight our fights together and in the open. I think, too, Nate, we ought to be strong for our son's sake. He is so dear to us, why shouldn't we forget our triumph over our enemies and teach him to love humanity, even if human beings often prove unlovable?"

"You're a quitter," he charged.

"There are two little cemeteries up in Eden Valley that are sound arguments in favor of quitting, Nate. We had our code—an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, and we lived up to it; but it seems to me we never derived any happiness from it. I can't be happy in Eden Valley any more, because every time I'll leave it I'll have to drive through this—this desolation—this place where men have lived and loved and fought and struggled and dreamed their futile little dreams—and went away in despair. I'll never forget that wherever these dispossessed people may wander they'll always hate you and me."

"We can get along without their approval, Lorry."

"But can we get along without the approval of Nate Tichenor and Lorry Kershaw, young Robin Tichenor and those that, please God, will come after him?"

"Darby!"

"Yes, sir."

"Turn the car around and overtake that farmer we just passed!"

They passed the man and at Tichenor's command Darby stopped the car and Tichenor got out and walked back to the approaching wagon. The man pulled up, set his brake and waited for Tichenor to speak.

"Hello, Dan," said Tichenor. "You're Dan Clanton, aren't you? We went to school together in Valley Center."

Clanton nodded.

"Where are you headed, Dan?"

"God knows. I don't. The bondholders foreclosed on my farm and told me to go."

"Tell you what you do, Dan—turn around and go back to your farm and stay there until you're evicted. If that happens while there's snow on the ground you just pull out to the old Bar H headquarters in Eden Valley and put up there. The old house is furnished, and you can remain there until spring. You'll be very comfortable. January is a bad month to be out on the road with your wife and children. Besides, I think I can give you a fair job looking after our golf coarse. Turn around, Dan. You'll have time to get back to the old farm house, get your beds and the cook stove set up and be settled after a fashion before sunset."

"You mean that, Tichenor?"

"Of course I do."

"After what I done to you—"

"Tut-tut, Dan. That was a bully fight while it lasted. I would have forgotten it if you hadn't reminded me of it." He smiled at the man and his wife and entered his limousine, which had turned and was now waiting alongside Clanton's farm wagon.

In silence they drove on toward Valley Center.

"Drive around to Joe Brainerd's plant," Nate ordered Darby as they came into Valley Center.

Obeying the imperious summons of the horn, Joe Brainerd came out and welcomed them. Tichenor explained, "Joe, I have a big story for you—so big I think it's worth getting out an extra and having it in the post office tonight. This is the thirtieth of December and the day after tomorrow will be New Year's day. I have a curious desire to give Forlorn Valley a Happy New Year, and I have also a curious desire to write the head for your story, which must be seven columns wide and in the biggest and blackest type in your shop."

"I'll run your head if I like it, Nate."

"You'll like it. The line is: 'Forlorn Valley Saved.'"

"That's a great head, Nate."

"I thought you'd like it." Dryly. "Joe, I made up my mind to smash Silas Babson—and I did, but in order to smash him I had to smash his bank and in order to smash his bank I had to smash Forlorn Valley.

"Then something of tremendous importance happened. My wife presented me with a son, and I was so grateful to her I bought from that New York bank all of the lands of the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district which had come into its possession by foreclosure. I paid that bank just half what the lands had cost them and I have since deeded the lands to my wife—just a little gift for presenting me with a son. Of course I haven't the slightest idea what Lorry intends doing with Forlorn Valley, but I wouldn't be surprised if she decides to deed back to those people the farms they have lost, taking a first mortgage to secure her for the amount each individual farm was bonded. That will give her better than a half-million-dollar profit."

"And then you'll let the farmers have free water, Nate?"

"Joe, you are much too optimistic. I haven't a word to say about that water. Last year I killed the Mountain Valley Power company and deeded the dam-site and the lake-site back to the Bar H Land and Cattle company. Just abandoned that dream. Then I married Lorry, and we merged the Circle K and the Bar H into a new corporation known as the Eden Valley Land and Cattle company, with powers, under our charter, to sell water. However, the Circle K was a larger and more valuable ranch than the Bar H—and after Lorry had thrown her cattle into the deal I'll be hanged if she didn't emerge from it with a controlling interest in the capital stock. Consequently she controls the water of Eden Valley creek, and she owns most of Forlorn Valley and Lake Babson and a whole smear of canals and laterals, so if she asks my advice in the matter I'll suggest that she hire a good engineer to run her irrigation system, and a bookkeeper to bill the water to the farmers and collect the money and give the poor devils the water at a nominal price for enough years to enable them to catch up even on the losses they suffered when Babson's bank went bust."

"Dan, Turn Around and Go Back to Your Farm and Stay There Until You Are Evicted."

"Nate, that's fine as far as it goes and provided your wife follows your advice, but this valley can't function without a bank."

"I'm supplying that, Joe. The bank building has been ready for months and I have a charter from the superintendent of state banks and will open for business in a week or two. I've hired a good man to be cashier and manager and have told him to be a banker, not a pawnbroker. I think I'll take on Babson's old board of directors. They know more about this valley and its needs than I do, and those that lost their stock in Babson's bank will be permitted to pay for it out of their dividends and the increased valuation of the stock as the years go by."

"Do you know, Lorry, I think we should put in another nine holes of golf and build a nice little club house up in Eden Valley and throw it open to the boys and girls of Forlorn Valley. Get their minds on golf and off rural gossip, you know. Buck 'em up and make 'em feel less provincial. After all, is there any reason why farmer boys and girls shouldn't play golf?"

Lorry made a dive for him; her arms went tight around his neck. "Oh, Nate, you, fakir! You fraud! You great-hearted schemer—" And then she was weeping tears of joy in his arms.

"This is certainly a whale of a story," Joe Brainerd mumbled, and wiped his eyes on the hem of his villainous old compositor's apron. "Don't you think I'd better put a box in the center of the page, in black type, to the effect that Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Tichenor wish Forlorn Valley a happy and prosperous New Year?"

Nate nodded. "Come up for dinner New Year's day, Joe. There are a number of things I want to talk over with you—sort of stand at my right hand and hold the bridge with me."

"Thanks. Happy New Year, folks. Now if you'll excuse me I'll fly at that extra. I want to write the story well and I want to get out what Babson used to call a 'rousing' editorial." He proffered an inky paw to Nate and Lorry in turn. "It's a pretty good old world, after all, isn't it?"

"It is," said Lorry, "if you make it so. Isn't that so, darling?"

"It is," Nate Tichenor replied, with a wink at Joe Brainerd, "even if one has to wing-tip it to make it behave."

[THE END]

New Domestic Animals Have Been Added by Modern Science to Be of Aid to Man

How important have become the new domestic animals added by modern medical and biological science to the short list of creatures domesticated by mankind in previous ages, says Dr. E. E. Free, is indicated by a recent warning of the Wistar institute of Philadelphia, concerning bogus strains of Wistar white rats believed to be on sale by unscrupulous dealers. The number of guinea pigs used as test animals in medical laboratories undoubtedly exceeds by many times the number of wild guinea pigs ever alive at once in their native South America. The tiny vinegar eels sometimes seen under a microscope in old vinegar have been "domesticated" in at least one biological laboratory.

At Yale there is a domesticated strain of the animalcules called paramecia, often found wild in ditch water. Prof. S. O. Mast of Johns Hopkins university has domesticated amebas, another lowly miscroscopic creature of ditches and ponds. The small crablike creatures called Daphnias have been domesticated both as food for aquarium fish and as material for biological experiments. The fruit fly called Drosophila is domesticated in scores of laboratories, where it is used in studies of heredity. A new medical procedure is the treatment of certain bone diseases by living maggots of another fly; so that these, too, have joined the bees as domesticated insects.

The Wistar institute has domesticated for experimental purposes the opossum and the Mexican salamander or axoloti. The chief laboratory animal, however, is the white rat; so useful that pedigrees are kept and pure-bred strains established just as is done by breeders of pedigreeds horses or dogs.—Pathfinder Magazine.

"To Run the Gantlet"

Gantlet, in this case, was originally gantlope, meaning the passage between two files of soldiers. The reference is to a punishment formerly common among soldiers and sailors. The men were drawn up in two lines facing each other. All were provided with rope ends. The offender had to run down the lane thus formed, all men inflicting punishment as he passed.

INVENTION AND TEACHING

Civilization, now more than six thousand years old, and still in the making, is an arch whose two supporting bases are invention and teaching. When man found out how to chip a stone and so make a tool, the process did not become complete until someone had taught the community how to duplicate the tool and how to use it.

Thus by inventing and discovering, then disseminating whatever seemed good and useful, man ascended. Discoveries and inventions are made, not only by men like Columbus and Edison, but also by many not honored on the pages of history. Similarly, the torch of culture is handed on not only by Socrates and Jesus, but also by countless others who remain unknown. As the Inventors are not the only ones who invent, so the Teachers are not the only ones who teach. Lincoln's Gettysburg address was a great piece of teaching. Benjamin Franklin is notable alike for discoveries, inventions, and teachings.

Any man who can review, in a detached way, the course of his own life, will acknowledge his debt to some teacher, be it father or mother, instructor or orator, minister or priest, writer or actor, employer or competitor, friend or enemy. The most fruitful experience in life arises when the inquiring mind comes under the influence of the skillful teacher. Some day the student so blessed may look back with wondering gratitude upon the transforming hands once laid upon him.

Every stage of life calls for teaching. He who is beyond the need of it is already dead mentally. A trait of the person who achieves much is a strong interest in something, coupled with a disposition to respond to teaching, from whatever source it may come. Two men may go through the same experience, one gleaning nothing therefrom, the other learning so much that he is thereby led to redirect the course of life.

Success, insofar as it may be gained through training, is won by cultivating such powers and attitudes of mind and interests: the habit of observing and reading; expressing oneself through conversation and discussion, through speaking and writing; intellectual curiosity and study; freedom from superstition and prejudice; open-mindedness; and the ability to profit by experience.

APPRECIATION

Although this is Monday, people are still talking about the good time they had on the Fourth of July. Francis Finnegan general chairman of the celebration, is frequently mentioned with appreciation for his splendid management, which gave this city the best celebration since around 1900. The wholehearted co-operation of Grass Valley and the outpouring of floats, marching orders and features from that city, serves to lessen the four miles that intervenes between here and there.

It is also pleasant to record that there were fewer highway accidents than usually happen on a Sunday. If there was any drunkenness it was not the kind that becomes a public nuisance. The people who packed our streets on the Fourth also commented on the good order that Chief of Police Robson and his aids maintained through out the day.

The sports events were keenly interesting, from the tug-of-war in which Lava Cap men won over the Murchie stalwarts, to the extraordinarily exciting bouts of wrestlers using the Cornish jacket and Cornish methods.

The parade itself was of absorbing interest. The part the boys and girls plaeyd in it. the excellent bands of music, the flutter of colors, and exhibition of some very handsome horses, such as oldsters knew when they were youngsters, and the grand marshall wearing the sacrosanct regalia that has clothed the grand marshalls of our Fourth of July parades for the past 35 years, all contribute to a memory to be cherished.

Fundamentally it was real old-time American celebration such as few American communities enjoy now-a-days and everyone of us with a spark of patriotism in his heart enjoyed it.

TARZAN AND HIS MATE IS YEAR'S AMAZING MOVIE

"Tarzan and His Mate," whcih is coming to the Nevada Theater next Wednesday and Thursday nights, is hailed by film critics as the year's most amazing movie, a triumph of art over nature and fiction over fact. By comparison authentic adventures in the actual wilderness are dull and colorless. There hasn't been anything like this one since the days of Circus Maximus, many blood-pumping scenes. . . Young Mr. Weissmuller is amazing in his tree-top role. Some of his stunts would make a mummy gape in astonishment. He rides elephants, rhinos, hippos, tussles with lions and crocodiles, knocks off enemies like a true denizen of the jungle, with that widely emulated, exciting call of his. slay the various bloodsweating behemoths he encounters we'd just as leave not double for them in the battle sequences. The svelte, curvacious Maureen O'Sullivan has learned a few tricks on her own account and comes to close quarters with various beasts, and the chiller-thriller atmosprere of the film is halted upon one occasion for a scene of lyric beauty in which she and her Tarzan indulge in an exhibition of water sports. "Tarzan and His Mate" is truly an amazing movie. It's one you mustn't miss. For without actuar, visual evidence you'll never know just how amazing a motion picture may be.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Giovinetti, Mrs. Joe Giovinetti, Sr., Mrs. Catherine Reynolds and daughter were visitors over the Fourth. All are former residents here.

REWARD

We will give anyone $5.00 for the name of any of our Westinghouse owners who have paid us 1 cent or more for repairs of any kind on a Westinghouse refrigerator.

Only Westinghuose is dual-automatic. The Westinghouse is the only fully automatic electric refrigerator on the market that is dual-automatic. Most refrigerators are automatic under normal conditions, but Westinghouse is automatic under abnormal conditions.

And remember the Westinghouse has no old fashioned cam or rollers to get pitted and loose their compression.

The Westinghouse has only three moving parts, sealed with a bath of oil, away form dust, dirt and corrosion.

You have never heard of a noisy Westinghouse, they are guaranteed against noise.

They do not use wood in their cabinets. They are all steel.

There is no armatures to burn out, belts to replace, brushes to replace, commutators to sand paper down piston rings to replace. None of the old fashioned parts to give trouble.

No wonder Westinghouse can give a 5 year protection plan on the hermetically sealed mechanism for only one dollar ($1), peryear.

No wonder any of our customers have never paid a cent for repairs on a Westinghouse. A Westinghouse will last for a life time and you forget there is a mechanism to it. You don't even have to oil it.

Why buy an old fashioned refigerator with troublesome parts with a one year factory guarantee when you can buy a dual-automatic Westinghouse for the same money with a 5 year protection plan for only $1 per year. The Westinghouse has surplus power for hot days, so you may freeze a dessert in a short while in the hottest months of July and August. They operate cheaper, using less electricity than other electric refrigerators.

We know what a Westinghouse will do. We will gladly put a Westinghouse electric refrigerator alongside any electric refrigerator built. It will freeze faster, run less to do the same work, operate cheaper and run quieter.

Yes, we take in your old ice box and have the very to pay if you like. We sold easiest of terms, Two years and delivered 9 Westinghouse refrigerators Saturday, June 30, 1934. There must be a reason.

UTILITIES WILL SWELL TAX FUND $400,000 MORE

JULY 9—Addtional state taxes in excesss of $400,000 will be collected from California public utilities this year as a result of an audit of their gross revenue, it was annnouced today by Fred E. Stewart, member of the State Board of Equalization.

The utilities make yearly reports to the Board showing their gross receipts, upon which the state tax is levied, Stewart explained.

"In pursuance of the Board's policy of absolute equality in tax administration," he said, "an audit of each utility has been made to determine whether any taxable revenues have been omited from the returns filed by the companies.

"This auditing work, which will produce almost a half million dollars in state revenues was completed at an expense of less than $15,000.

"An excellent example is afforded of a situation where sorely needed revenue has been raised, not by placing an additional load on already overburdened taxpayers, but by requiring the utilities to assume their full share of the burden."

EARNING POWER

HERE'S GOOD NEWS if you thought you couldn't afford an electric refrigerator. Several leading manufacturers have built a brand new FARM refrigerator. It has all the important features of the University of California design, plus many new improvements. We promise that it surpasses anything you have ever seen before.

The Farm "25"—smallest of the new models, is pictured above. Here is an ideal size for the average farm. Ruggedly constructed for a lifetime of heavy-duty service, it is nevertheless extremely inexpensive. And it may be operated for as little as 5c a day.

The Farm "25," however, is only one of the new models. Others are available up to 125 cubic feet capacity. Or if you are handy with tools, you can even build one yourself—we will supply the plans. The important thing is to get an electric refrigerator on the job at once. California winters are no protection against food-spoilage and the losses in summer are tremendous.

THE FARM "25"
25 CUBIC FEET—ABOUT THREE TIMES MORE CAPACITY PER DOLLAR INVESTMENT THAN DOMESTIC TYPE REFRIGERATORS

DETACHABLE CAPES MAKE FOR VARIETY

PATTERN 9943

Detachable capes are so fascinating and so smart! This is a lovely dress for town wear, and it is adaptable to all sorts of occasions. It's especially attractive if made of a dotted print, as shown in the picture; but any of the checks, stripes or figured fabrics are nice for it. The dress is uniquely fashionable in that it combines tall slenderness with well-planned curves. The curved hip line is repeated by the curve of the yoke, collar and cape. Very becoming to everyone!

Pattern 9943 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 4 yards 39-inch fabric and ¼-yard contrasting.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth street, New York, N. Y.

TEST OF GENIUS

Two friends, one married and the other a bachelor, were at the latest play, admiring the performance of a famous actor.

"By Jove," the married man murmured, "he's wonderful. The way he displays affection toward the leading lady, eh?"

"Yes—pretty good," the bachelor agreed, "but, you know, he's been married to her for eighteen years."

"What? Really married! Gosh—what an actor!"—London Tit-Bits.

No Half-Way Work

"Women are a power in politics," said the mild-eyed professor.

"True," answered Miss Cayenne. "And if you'll glance over the list of historic women, you'll note that we never stop half-way. If we don't make politics immensely better we'll make it a whole lot wickeder.—Washington Star.

HISTORICAL CALIFORNIA

WHERE PRESIDENT OF BEAR FLAG REPUBLIC LIVED

(By WNU Service)

In this adobe house, situated about one mile north of Red Bluff, Tehama county, lived William B. Ide, first and only president of the California Republic, also known as the Bear Flag Republic. The house was built in the early '40's. It is now owned and occupied by George E. Sutton and family.

Stream and Trail

(By WNU Service)

Three-fifths of the 2,000 pheasants to be released in Tehama and adjoining counties this year by the state fish and game commission have been transferred to the bird pens on the R. W. Hanna Meadow ranch at Paynes Creek near Red Bluff. The other 800 birds will be received from the state bird farm at Yountville within a few weeks.

One thousand of the birds will be set free a short time before the opening of the 1934 pheasant season, November 15-20. The others will be released after the season closes. The state is supplying the birds and the feed. Sportsmen of the district contribute the money to pay salaries of the game keepers.

The 700 incubated pheasants now in brooders at the Sonoma county sportsman's club at Cotati will soon be ready for distribution to ranchers in that county, sportsmen of the Petaluma district report.

About 10,000 trout were planted in Kanaka Creek near Alleghany, Sierra county, recently. The trout were hatched at Indian Valley and averaged about an inch and a half in size.

Duck stamps went on sale in all California counties Monday. The federal $1 stamp, which is to be affixed to hunting licenses in all states, was sponsored by Congressman Frank H. Buck, Vacaville, in a bill presented and approved by Congress. It is hoped that enough money will be raised from sale of the stamps to provide for the purchase of additional game refuges. The refuges, it is estimated, would save millions of ducks. The law requires duck hunters only to buy the stamp.

"Bud" Kline, nationally known sportsman and guide, says that wild life is recognized as one of the major assets of any country, whether it be measured by economical, social, political standards more than any other character building standard, for it brings happiness, inspiration and health to millions of the land, and in addition establishes an independent, nature-loving citizenship.

Ocean fishing from Santa Monica to Newport is improving. Every day fishermen, casting their lines in the surf, dropping them off barges or trolling off kelp beds are bringing in sizeable catches.

Silver Canyon Cove at the east edge of Catalina island has been found to be literally full of calico bass and immense barracuda. The yellowtail are of fair size and are biting better every day.

Near Camp Durwood on the Kern River, some of the most excellent fishing spots in the state may be found. A few of the choicest locations are Little Kern, Rattlesnake Creek, Jordan Hot Springs and Durwood Creek.

The middle fork of the Kings River and connecting streams have been good to fishermen this season. The most favored locations in the area are: Spanish, Geraldine, Los and Fleming lakes; and Rancheria, Cabin, Blue Canyon; Short Hair, Helm and Crown creeks.

News Oddities

(By WNU Service)

Porterville. — Odd frogs have been making their appearance here recently. Jerry Finch has a six-legged jumper which he captured in the lake at Murray Park. The six legs are fully developed. Harry Earle, Jr., took a five-legged frog from the same lake. The extra leg on the latest find is more like a fin than a leg.

Los Angeles. — To protect himself from his irate wife on their tenth wedding anniversary, Charles Edmund Cusack, Chicago advertising man, had to climb a tree, he testified in a divorce suit recently. He said his wife drove him from their home with a golf club and he had to climb the tree to escape her.

Los Angeles.—Prisoners in the county jail here don't like Robert E. Buckley's appetite. He eats, they complained, light bulbs and many strange metal articles of "food." He is serving six months for receiving stolen property. An inspection of the jail showed he hadn't been biting any bars to stem his appetite.

San Francisco. — Three years ago William Biehl, 69, Oakland, accidentally shot himself in the head. Doctors failed to find the bullet. Recently he went to a physician and complained of a pain in his eye. The missing bullet was found in the orb.

San Pedro. — James Willis, 47, of Gordon Road, South Hills, England, a fireman on a tanker here, died recently from a machine-gun bullet wound received during the World War. The bullet was thought to have passed through his head but instead had lodged behind his eye.

Sonora.—Every man in Gooseberry eradication camp No. 1 of the CCC can climb a tree. Every man did the other day when Roy Bloomstrom shot at and wounded a bear which had been raiding provisions. The bear charged and 30 workers immediately became tree climbers.

Centerville. — Manuel Rose bought the town jail here recently for $1. It hadn't housed a prisoner for many years. Children recently broke into the jail and were using it as a mud pie kitchen.

Mining & Oil

(By WNU Service)

Oil quotas for July, announced by Oil Administrator Ickes, penalize Oklahoma and increase the allowables of California and Texas. California gets an increase of 9,100 barrels per day, or 289,100 barrels gain for the month.

In the case of Texas, the operators are allowed to move up 9,800 barrels per day, which the administrator says is because Oklahoma over-produced and tanked 8,000,000 barrels of crude since January 1.

The new oil agreement, under which the schedules are worked out, carries the following points to refiners:

(1) Not to purchase, transport or run any oil produced in excess of quotas.

(2) To post prices for gasoline and sell all brands at the quoted price.

(3) To purchase from independent refiners all surplus gasoline.

Retail dealers have been guaranteed a minimum of three cents a gallon, in the attempt to terminate recurrent price warfare and eliminate unfair and destructive competition.

The plan is expected to stabilize the industry in California and provide an effective method of enforcing proration orders while at the same time ending demoralization of the market which has been caused by over-production of crude oil, dumping of gasoline at cut prices, and piling up of surplus stocks in hands of refiners lacking adequate storage facilities.

Remarking that the program will allow companies a fair profit on their operations, Administrator Ickes announced that he will maintain close watch over administration of the plan to prevent exorbitant prices and gouging of consumers.

The Apex Mining Company, headed by Charles B. Smith of Santa Barbara, has completed repairing the collar of the shaft in the Geraldine mine at Confidence in the Sonora area and has started development operations. The mine has been opened to 140 feet and a considerable quantity of good ore is reported to be available. It is equipped with a one-stamp pilot mill, but it is understood that a larger plant may soon be installed.

The Up-To-Date property in the Greenwood district near Placerville, adjoining the Sliger mine, has been purchased by C. J. Putman and associates

Varying Ideas as to Practice of Politeness

"It was Montesquieu's notion that 'It is pride that renders us polite,'" said Mr. Cato Ninetails; "yet a little further along in 'L'Esprit des Lois' he speaks of people who 'as they are always employed about their own business have not the politeness which is founded on indolence; and they really have not the leisure to attain it.' This would seem to imply that politeness is a matter of idleness, and, by extension, that indolence develops pride. Perhaps it does; few of us have enough of it to find out certainly. On the other hand, other authorities declare that 'politeness pays,' a dictum that has nothing to do with pride or leisure. Probably nobody is more interested in making things pay than the busy man. That's the principal reason why he keeps busy. Apprehension also has a considerable influence on politeness. If discourtesy is likely to get us into trouble, the probabilities are that we shall be polite; but perhaps this aspect of the question is included in the assertion that politeness pays.

"Whether it is pride, leisure or acquisitiveness that develops politeness, there is none too much of it. Sometimes we are impolite through ignorance, sometimes through carelessness, sometimes intentionally, sometimes because we are in a hurry and sometimes because we won't bother about it. With all that, the question of what constitutes politeness still remains. As in the case of a great many other words, the definition is likely to vary a great deal both geographically and chronologically. Politeness here may not be politeness there, and politeness now may not have been politeness then. Hence the wail 'O tempora, O mores!' Times and things and people are not what they once were, or what we are convinced they were —as long as we do not examine the records carefully.

"Politeness, of course, should mean well, but much of it merely says well or does well; it sounds well and looks well, but a little analysis will show that it does not mean anything. Its distinctive quality, as generally regarded, is polish, poise and grace. Sincerity is desirable, but, apparently, not essential, and it is not always even expected. Its purpose is mostly to make a good impression, which, no doubt, is what inspired Montesquieu's opinion that it is the effect of pride. On the other hand, a sincere and generous clumsiness may be—and often is—much more polite than the most polished utterance or graceful action. In such a case politeness neither says well nor does well. But it means well. It has had no training in expression, but has a foundation of truth that is often lacking in more skillful utterance. So perhaps it is well not to be too exacting in regard to what constitutes politeness."—Indianapolis News.

Practical Economy

When President Solomon of Haiti was forced to leave the country, the government of Haiti felt it could not afford to issue new stamps, so she issued orders that all postage stamps bearing his likeness were to be affixed upside down to the envelope and all that were not affixed in this manner were to be charged double the rate of postage.

Will Breed Goldenrod to Yield More Rubber

The United States Department of Agriculture is trying to increase the amount of rubber in goldenrod.

Believing that goldenrod has possibilities as an emergency source of rubber for the nation, the department has planted several native species of the plant at its experimental station near Charleston, S. C., and will select and breed promising varieties. Rubber specialists of the department believe the rubber content of goldenrod may be increased just as the suger content of sugar beets was increased by breeding and selection.

In the last two years the department analyzed more than thirty species of goldenrod gathered in the vicinity of Washington, D. C., and at Charleston, finding some in which the leaves, which contain most of the rubber in goldenrod, yielded as much as 7.91 per cent rubber.

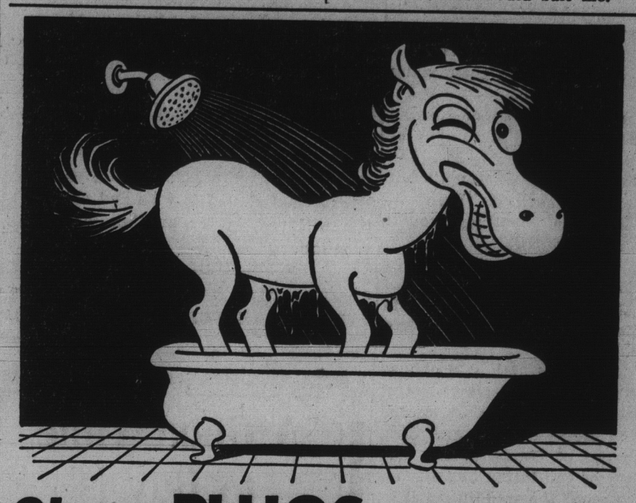

The Charleston plots have plants contributed by the Edison laboratories in Florida, plants collected in the vincinity of Charleston, and plants from Washington, D. C., and nearby regions.

THE NEW Firestone HIGH SPEED TIRE FOR 1934 Gives You
WIDER TREAD OF FLATTER CONTOUR
MORE AND TOUGHER RUBBER
GUM-DIPPED HIGH STRETCH CORDS
DEEPER NON-SKID
MORE THAN 50% LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE

SAFEST TIRE FIRESTONE EVER BUILT

THE New Firestone High Speed Tire for 1934 was built to give you the same dependable service it provided for the 33 drivers who started in the torturous 500-mile grind at Indianapolis May 30.

This new tire has a wider tread of flatter contour, deeper non-skid, more and tougher rubber, giving you more than 50% longer non-skid mileage.

Besides being Safety Protected on the outside it is Safety Protected on the inside. Eight additional pounds of pure rubber are absorbed by every one hundred pounds of cords. This additional rubber surrounds every cotton fiber inside every cord in every ply. This is accomplished by soaking the cords in liquid rubber by Gum-Dipping, a Firestone patented process.

Heat caused by internal friction of cotton fibers destroys tires—causes separation and blowouts.

Gum-Dipping counteracts friction and heat—provides greater adhesion and strength, assuring car owners of the greatest Safety, Protection and Economy that it is possible for human ingenuity to build into a tire.

Every one of the 33 drivers at Indianapolis chose and bought Firestone High Speed Tires. Race drivers KNOW tire construction—they will not risk their lives or chance of victory on any other than Firestone.

At terrific speeds the cars plunge into the treacherous turns—tires are braced against the scorching brick track—so hot the tires fairly smoke at times—they give—yield and stretch—every conceivable force works to tear the tire to pieces, yet Firestone High Speed Tires "come back" on the straightaways. Not once during the entire race did a tire fail.

Surely this is the most amazing proof ever known of Extra Strength, SAFETY and Dependability. Call on the Firestone Service Dealer or Service Store nearest you TODAY. Equip your car with new Firestone High Speed Tires for 1934.

SLOW DRIVERS WARNED BY CATO

The constant drive against excessive speed and reckless driving will be balanced this summer by a campaign against slow motorists who clog the highways.

A California Highway Patrol movement to promote safety and courtesy will be featured by a more diligent watch for motorists who impede the flow of traffic by driving in the center of the highways or refusing to let other cars pass.

Numerous reports of accidents having been caused by slow moving vehiciles caused Raymond Cato, chief of the patrol, to issue the new order and call attention to section 1228 of the California Vehicle code which reads;

"In driving up on the right side of a highway the driver shall drive as closely as practical to the right edge or curb of the highway except when overtaking or passing another vehicle, or when placing a vehicle in position to make a left-hand turn."

Any motorist who crowds to the left violates the law, he pointed out.
